ARTIST'S STATEMENT:

---

There is a space that exists upon the tip-of-the-tongue, a site of profound intrinsic curiosity. Taste aside; it is concerned with imminence and inaccessibility, language and memory. Sometimes the first word out of our mouth is hardly a word at all, but rather an inarticulate sound that is more closely related to what we would identify as gesture. Suspended, held at the cusp of verbalization, there is something there and you feel it strongly. It is a haunting moment. According to Freud, the investigation of such a quality of feeling is more properly aesthetic than psychoanalytic in its scope and depth of inquiry. I find myself in a position to concur...

My work is a sensuous exploration of that which is indeterminable in things.
